Third Party Cookies
It may happen that Facebook, Twitter, Youtube, Vimeo, Flickr, Storify and other third party domains use their cookies to share contents on social network or to aggregate statistics on access. Presence of cookies, their number and status may depend on your previous usage of the relevant domains before visiting or at the time of browsing the Parliament website.
Therefore, you should verify what cookie policy a relevant social network has.

How to control cookies on your computer?
Some people might believe that information on their computer or mobile device is of intrusive character, especially where such information is stored and used by third parties without knowledge of its owner. If you wish, you may block some or all of the cookies, and even delete the cookies stored on your device; however, you should remember that certain parts may not function in such case. To delete or block cookies, simply change the privacy settings on your browser.
